

4-position fiber optic patch panel

Article Overview

A four-position fiber optic patch panel is a compact enclosure designed to terminate, manage, and interconnect up to four fiber optic connections, supporting SC, LC, or other connector types for efficient network distribution.

Overview

A four-position fiber optic patch panel is typically used in both commercial and industrial environments to organize and protect fiber optic cables while providing easy access for patching and maintenance. These panels are designed to accommodate four adapters or modules, which can support multiple fibers per adapter depending on the connector type (e.g., SC duplex or LC quad) and the panel's internal configuration .

Key Features

- Port Capacity: Supports four fiber connections, often expandable with modular cassettes or adapter packs .
- Connector Types: Compatible with SC, LC, FC, or ST connectors, depending on the model .
- Mounting Options: Available in DIN rail, wall-mount, or rack-mount configurations, allowing flexible installation in space-constrained environments .
- Material and Durability: Constructed from aluminum or cold-rolled steel with protective coatings for industrial durability .
- Fiber Management: Includes integrated fiber management rods, splice cassettes, and adapter holders to prevent bending and maintain signal integrity
