

C-type reinforcement bracket for cable trays

Article Overview

C-type reinforcement brackets are steel support brackets designed to securely mount cable trays to walls or ceilings, providing reinforced support for various tray widths and loads.

Overview

C-type reinforcement brackets, also called C-shaped support brackets, are used to support cable trays in both horizontal and vertical installations. They are particularly useful for wire mesh or basket-style trays, offering a reinforced profile to handle heavier loads and maintain structural integrity over longer spans . These brackets are compatible with multiple tray widths, typically ranging from 100 mm to 400 mm, depending on the manufacturer .

Material and Finish Options

These brackets are generally made of steel and are available in different finishes to suit environmental conditions:

- Hot-dip galvanized (HG) for corrosion resistance
- Stainless steel (SS) for high durability in harsh environments
- Defender (DF) or other protective coatings for industrial applications
