Overview of Indonesia's Connectivity

Indonesia is an archipelagic nation comprising over 17,500 islands, with five main islands: Sumatra, Java, Borneo (Kalimantan), Sulawesi, and New Guinea (Papua) . Its connectivity is shaped by its geography, requiring a combination of maritime, air, road, and digital networks to link the islands and major cities.

Physical Transport Connections

- Maritime Routes: Indonesia operates around 300 ports, connecting the archipelago for cargo and passenger transport. Key ports include Jakarta, Surabaya, and Bali .
- Air Transport: The country has 297 airports, with major international hubs at Soekarno-Hatta (Jakarta) and Ngurah Rai (Bali) .
- Road Networks: On larger islands like Java and Sumatra, highways and expressways connect major cities such as Jakarta, Surabaya, Bandung, and Medan .
- River Networks: In Kalimantan, rivers like the Kapuas, Barito, and Mahakam historically link inland settlements to coastal areas .
