

Great Value Fireproof Optical Cable

Article Overview

Fireproof optical cables are designed to maintain data transmission and structural integrity during fire, with certifications like CPR B2ca ensuring safety and reliability.

Overview

Fireproof optical cables, such as those comparable to Great Value offerings, are engineered to safeguard critical communication lines during fire emergencies. They maintain optical signal integrity under extreme heat, often exceeding 180 minutes of fire exposure at temperatures up to 1000°C . These cables are suitable for indoor and outdoor applications, including hospitals, airports, tunnels, data centers, and industrial plants .

Construction and Features

- Optical Fibers: Typically contain up to 48 color-coded fibers in loose tubes, each filled with a thixotropic gel to prevent water ingress .
- Fire Protection: Each tube is wrapped with fire-resistant tape, and the cable core is reinforced with fiberglass strength members .
- Outer Jacket: Made from low-smoke, halogen-free (LSZH) materials, providing flame retardance and minimal toxic emissions .
- Mechanical Durability: Resistant to bending, impact, and environmental stress, ensuring continued operation during and after fire exposure .
