

Palestine fiber optic cable cut

Article Overview

Internet and fixed-line communications in Gaza were cut after the territory's last fiber optic cable was attacked, with the Palestinian Authority blaming Israel.

The Palestinian Authority (PA) reported that all internet and fixed-line communication services in Gaza were disrupted following an attack on the last remaining main fiber optic line, which they attributed to Israeli forces . This outage affected Gaza City, the northern, central, and southern parts of the Strip, leaving the territory largely isolated from global communications for consecutive days .

Impact on Services and Emergency Response

While mobile calls remain available, they operate at very limited capacity . The outage has hindered emergency services, with the Palestinian Red Crescent reporting difficulties in coordinating first responders and humanitarian aid due to the communication blackout . Maintenance and repair teams have been unable to access the damaged sites safely, and Israeli authorities have reportedly prevented repairs to other telecommunication lines for weeks or months, exacerbating the disruption .

Broader Context

The internet cut is part of a wider pattern of infrastructure damage amid the ongoing conflict, which has already severely affected water, electricity, and road networks in Gaza . Human rights organizations have condemned the deliberate targeting of communications as a violation of international humanitarian law, emphasizing that cutting off internet access during escalations deprives civilians of vital lifelines, obst...
